librarians. INFPs make compassionate and insightful counselors, psychologists, and social workers and strive toward helping their students gain self-understanding and harmony within their relationships and their lives. As counselors, they enjoy the process of understanding others as they come to understand themselves.

Religion

Minister/priest

Religious educator

Missionary

Church worker

Pastoral counselor

For many INFPs the commitment of a religious career is rewarding. INFPs enjoy helping other people develop their spiritual side and receive pleasure from striving for an attainment for themselves and others. They often prefer a home setting but with experience can comfortably enjoy preaching or lecturing. The bottom line for INFPs is to do work that is in harmony with their inner values and beliefs, and often careers within religion provide that.

Health Care

Dietitian/nutritionist

Physical therapist

Home health social worker

Occupational therapist

Massage therapist

Speech language pathologist/audiologist

Manual arts therapist

Holistic health practitioner (alternative medicine)

Geneticist

Ethicist

The appealing aspects of these health care fields for many INFPs is the ability to work closely and intimately.

Technology

Customer relations manager

Coach

Engagement manager

Educational software developer

Staff advocate (technology consultant)

Project manager

Human resources recruiter

With the proliferation of technology, there is a rapidly growing need for people who understand technology but also have good people and communication skills. Being the liaison between the technology people and the end users appeals to many INFPs, who find these jobs satisfy their need to help and be connected with their workers.

Remember, these are only some areas that provide satisfying expression for the natural talents of the INFP.
